Andrews' Geyser, near Round Knob on Eastern Slope of Blue Ridge Mountains within a few miles of the Great Eastern Divide, on line of Southern Railway, 26½ miles east of Asheville. The Geyser throws continuously a great column of water 250 feet into the air and constitutes a spectacle unique in its grandeur. In the tortuous ascent of the mountain this wonderful geyser may be seen from first one side of the train and then another. Erected in honor of Col. Alex D. Andrews, first Vice President of Southern Railway.
